Three Appreciations

ONE of the lawyer's happiest experiences is stimulating companionship with fellow-workers. Whatever may be the public value of the results attained by the American Law Institute and by the Federal Advisory Committee there can be no doubt that from these groups have emerged many enduring friendships.

The Federal Advisory Committee includes as many diverse personalities as does the Supreme Court itself. Men of all types have gladly joined in rendering the unpaid public service which the Court has called upon them to render. The rough and ready distinction between "liberals" and "conservatives" is in both bodies difficult to apply. More enlightening (as far as the Committee is concerned) is a classification based upon predominant experience—judging, teaching, practising. Even so a teacher may sometimes be found voting with the practitioners—and vice versa—this to the consternation of those who had counted upon his support.

The member who most often thus defies classification is "Eddie" Morgan. The very fact that he is generally referred to in familiar style is an indication of the affectionate regard in which he is held by his colleagues. When, on a division, his view prevails he shows no irritating elation. When he is overruled he becomes neither lachrymose nor surly. He is a good sport as well as a good lawyer—a combination less usual than it ought to be.

One of Morgan's outstanding characteristics is his thoroughness. He appears always to have given careful consideration to the questions that call for decision and he never takes a position which he is unprepared to defend. Sometimes those of us who are less thorough than he will entirely overlook some important aspect of the matter under discussion only to have it promptly emphasized by our more alert colleague. After a proposed rule has been debated there remain no unsuspected implications. It would be ungracious to estimate the comparative usefulness of members of the Committee. It is, however, safe to say that in this respect nobody outranks the Member from Cambridge.

To think of him in connection with the American Law Institute is instantly to focus attention upon the Model Code of Evidence, the formation of which is preeminently his achievement. It required no little courage to confront the profession with this challenge to age-old tradition. As a reformer who reverently holds fast much that is time-tried but is fearless in proposing change where change seems needed, Morgan has rendered the greatest possible service to the lawyers of tomorrow.

It is hard for one old enough to be his father to realize that Morgan is about to retire "on age". It is at any rate safe to predict that age will never wither him or custom stale his infinite variety. In whatever activity he undertakes, he can count upon the goodwill of all who have had the rare privilege of association with him in important work.

EDMUND M. MORGAN is now completing his twenty-fifth year of teaching at the Harvard Law School. His teaching at the School has been almost wholly in the field of adjective law, although in his earlier years, in other law schools, in Minnesota and in Yale, he taught several of the principal branches of the substantive law such as Contracts and Torts. He was well prepared, by his studies at Harvard College and at Harvard Law School, and by eight years of very active practice at the bar, to teach Evidence and Civil Procedure, the subjects in which he has attained supremacy. No one questioned his unique fitness to draft the Model Code of Evidence for the American Law Institute; and no one doubted the wisdom of the choice when he was appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States as a member of the Advisory Committee to draft the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. In the first World War he served as assistant to the Judge Advocate General of the Army; and when it was determined to unify the services it was in the nature of things that Mr. Forrestal, the Secretary of Defense, should ask Mr. Morgan to act as chairman of a committee to draft a Uniform Code of Military Justice.

It has been my happy lot to have an office adjoining his in Langdell Hall, and for many years I have been able at all times to consult with him and to draw on his knowledge and wisdom. For he has in large measure the combination of scientia et sapientia, as that great lawyer Cicero might express it. He is naturally endowed with wisdom, and he has acquired knowledge through study and experience. But over and beyond this, he has character, that intellectual and moral quality which we call integrity. And besides he has a personality which inevitably makes friends of his colleagues and his students, among whom I am privileged to include myself.

IT IS always difficult to appraise the attainments and character of a man—doubly so when he is a prominent figure. In the case of Professor Edmund M. Morgan, Jr., however, no task remains. A conclusion has long since been reached and approved. His national reputation for scholarship and teaching excellence is evidence of the place he has achieved in American Law. He is one of its masters.

While it would seem, under these circumstances, that little else can be said, I believe too little is known of his public work. I have in mind, particularly, Professor Morgan's contribution to the judicial processes of government. The activity I have personal knowledge of relates to his contributions to the Department of Defense in connection with his service as Chairman of the Department of Defense Committee on A Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Some background, I think, will give perspective to Professor Morgan's work on the Uniform Code. The court-martial systems and military justice have been the subject of heated controversy for generations. Military justice has always presented

HERMAN K. BRANDMILLER.

EDMUND M. MORGAN.

Two well known young men of the city have returned from Harvard university where they carried off high honors. They are Herman K. Brandmiller and Edmund M. Morgan, Jr. The young men were graduated from law school in the same year, 1937. They entered Harvard the same year, and have been together in their class since they started and will begin their law practice together.

As soon as they have been admitted to the Ohio bar, they will open an office in the city. They arrived home Wednesday morning.

Mr. Brandmiller is the son of Herman Brandmiller, one of the best known citizens of Youngstown. Mr. Morgan is the son of E. M. Morgan Sr. formerly a member of the firm of Baldwin, Morgan & Company.

a large number of challenging difficulties. To achieve substantial justice of the type we would like to hope civilian courts dispense, within the disciplined ranks of a military establishment, seems, at times, to be an impossibility. On the face of it, a better example of colliding objects cannot be found.

The Morgan Committee began its work in August of 1948 and completed its mammoth task by submitting a completed Uniform Code of Military Justice in February, 1949. This was a remarkable achievement, and it will stand as a monument to Professor Morgan.

Although Professor Morgan had served in the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army in World War I, he had not been concerned with problems of military law for some twenty-five years. His ability to master the whole, complex and technical subject of military law was a revelation. The problems usually faced by the academic professor in the practical work-a-day world were no problems so far as he was concerned. As Chairman of the Committee, his erudition and amazing fund of legal knowledge were smoothly and quickly translated into the most practical solutions.

All the tools of the teaching professor were natural and useful in his hands when used in conferences which brought together people representing strong conflicting viewpoints. He cajoled, he persuaded, he convinced. He listened, he was convinced, he changed his mind. This was the same Professor Morgan, but in a wholly different classroom. We saw the same brilliance practically applied in an important and highly specialized field of law. As I am sure two generations of Harvard students have found, he was conservative in all things, except his shining ideas and ideals. We found a sharp mind working with a warm heart.

On a subject on which honest men differ, he achieved a remarkable unanimity of opinion among the Committee members, and produced the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which provides the some substantive law and the same procedures for all persons serving in all the armed forces.

Developments At The Law School

DEAN ERWIN N. GRISWOLD

A story is told about one of the several occasions when the faculty of the Harvard Law School considered the question of admission of women. This time was about 1913, when Ezra Ripley Thayer was dean. After some discussion, one of the members of the faculty, not known for his reticence, spoke up and said, "If women are admitted to the School, I will have to revise all my lectures." There was a suitable pause. The dean is then reported to have said, "Are there any other arguments in favor of the proposal?"

When one is speaking of changes at the Harvard Law School and the future course of its development, it will be impossible not to record that women were finally admitted to the School in the fall of 1950 (although two were actually registered, in cooperation with Radcliffe College, as long ago as 1899, and attended classes for a few weeks until the arrangement was vetoed by the Corporation). Nevertheless, it does not seem to me that this particular development is either very important or very significant. Most of us have seen women from time to time during our lives, and have managed to survive the shock. We have even had a few around Langdell and Austin Halls for a good many years now, with no serious consequences. There seems to be no likelihood that we will have a very large proportion of women among our students. I think we can take it, and I doubt if it will change the character of the School or even its atmosphere to any detectable extent. As of today, I doubt if this change alone will require any of our faculty members to revise many of their lectures.

But there are some other developments in the air which do seem to me to be of great significance. As far as I know there are no plans for revolutionary change. I do not detect any notion that the Harvard Law School feels that it has devised a new formula for legal education, or that my brethren of the faculty propose throwing over all of the past and replacing it with some dazzling new-found approach to the law and legal education.

Nevertheless, there are developments. Most of the lectures given in the School in 1913 would seem inadequate now; while many of those now given would have struck the students of that earlier generation as strange, vague, and far afield. Without meaning to be exhaustive, and without undertaking to foretell very much of the future, let me list below some of the significant developments which seem to me to be occurring in the Law School, at the middle of the twentieth century.

1. Teaching Materials and Methods. Law Schools have had to make some remarkable adjustments since fifty years ago. We are inclined to look back on those days as a relatively simple period, and we may well be right. Five courses in the first year, six in the second, six in the third, all standard courses, no Taxation, Labor Law, Administrative Law, Accounting, no seminars, no papers, not much feeling that a lawyer needed to know anything but law, and that rather pure law, too. From such comparisons, it is easy to see that we have made some changes, and those changes are clearly still in progress.

Law schools now have available the same time for their task that they have had for the past seventy-five years or so. But the subject matter with which they must deal has greatly changed and increased. The necessary adjustments in teaching programs have not been easy to make and are by no means completed. The changes reflect a change in the position and function of lawyers in the community. At one time they were primarily family solicitors and forensic advocates; and legal education was designed for fitting men to perform these tasks. These functions are still performed by lawyers, and they must not be ignored in training. But lawyers today are also extensively engaged as business advisers, and have to deal constantly with many aspects of government regulations not even thought of a few decades ago.

To meet these new demands, new subject matters have been added to the curriculum, old courses have been adjusted, often at great pain, to make way for the changes, new materials have been developed, and new teaching methods experimented with. There is clearly a ferment in the faculty on all of these matters, and out of it will come more developments and more changes—which will surely make the next half century of legal education as interesting as the last has been.

2. Faculty. The next area of development is closely related to the last. There have already been significant developments cent larger than it was before the war. Not more. During the past year we have undertaken the Teaching Fellow program, with marked success. Counting the Teaching Fellows, our faculty is now about fifty per cent larger than before the war. Not counting the Teaching Fellows, nearly half of our faculty have been appointed within the past ten years, most of these since 1945.

In making faculty selections, many factors have been considered. Although the faculty is now perhaps as young in average age as it has been for many years, it stands rather high in practical experience. Some of this experience has been obtained in government service; several of the new faculty members have had substantial experience in private practice of the typically strenuous sort. We may expect that new faculty members will continue to be persons who combine intellectual and teaching capacities with the ability to keep their feet on the ground.

One of the factors which limits development of a faculty is, of course, the matter of finances. I think quite a case can be made for the proposition that Law Schools have long been among the stepchildren of education. To put a rather striking example—the Harvard Medical School spends not twice as much per student each year as is spent at the Law School, but seven times as much! Of course the problems are somewhat different, but not that much different. Ways must be found to make it plain that adequate work in the fields of law and the social sciences generally requires financial support of a sort far beyond that which has hitherto been available. Prograss of this sort may be slow, but I think we can count on developments over the years to come which will mean a continued strengthening of the faculty and enlargement of its activities and resources.

3. Amelioration of the lot of students! The present generation of students will probably never admit it, but we have softened up considerably in the past few years. Some of us still have a nostalgic yearning for the days when men were men. But they are apparently gone for good, and there will not be too much wailing at the change. The development of the highly selective admissions system has greatly reduced the first year failure rate; and failures at the end of the second and third years have all but disappeared. The Teaching Fellow program with its system of Group Work performs a great service in assisting the first year students at what has been regarded as their most confused and uncertain period in Law School. There is some reduction in the number of students per faculty member, and many of the faculty are perhaps more approachable than was the case in some years of the past.

With the coming year, the new dormitory and dining room project will be an actuality, and that should go far toward developing a sense of unity among the students, and toward enhancing their feeling of being an essential part of the School. The new buildings will also have meeting rooms and common rooms, which will provide added facilities for law club work, group meetings and other activities.

No longer, I think, can it be said that the Harvard Law School has no interest in its students as individuals. That was never true in the past, but was doubtless sometimes felt. It is true that the School has counted on self-reliance and individual responsibility among its students, and it is hoped that that will remain its general policy. But the School, with the generous aid and support of the University and of its alumni, has now taken significant steps to improve its facilities and modes of operation in areas in which there has been felt a lack. This was not done just to ease the lot of students. It includes no luxuries. The purpose of all of these developments has been to increase the educational facilities and opportunities of the School. The years to come will disclose the fruits of this program.

4. Development of effective research activities. The Harvard Law School has always conducted research. Over the years much work of great importance to the law and to the country has come from its halls. Its faculty members as individuals have written many books, have drafted many statutes, have worked for many private and governmental organizations on tasks which had for their basic objectives the improvement of the law.

In recent years, however, the needs and opportunities in the field of research have developed and changed. Twenty years ago many of the faculty were working on the Restatements of the Law. That was a new sort of undertaking, although it was still basically a library job. But it did involve the coordinated work of considerable groups of people. In the intervening years, at least two further research projects have been conducted under the auspices of the School. One was the important Research in International Law, of which Professor Hudson was the director. The other is the extensive work in criminology and juvenile delinquency which has been done at the School for the past twenty years under the direction of Professor and Mrs. Glueck.

Significant as this work has been, we have so far made scarcely a beginning on what ought to be done. The School should have a regularly established Division of Research, with a Director of Research who would spend all his time and energy on the research activities of the School. It should have a number of large scale research projects under way at once. It should have the personnel and the facilities to undertake independent investigation of important problems where law plays a prominent role. It should be developing revisions of statutes in many fields, and making a constant positive contribution to the improvement of our law. Only one who has actually encountered the problems in this field will know what a difficult task this is. But it is clearly a task of first importance. And it is clearly a proper, indeed, an essential, task for a law school.

5. Continuation and development of service to the public. Out of an effective Division of Research will come the means of meeting one of the School's obligations which has not been met directly, except occasionally for many years. The School has an obligation to its community. It has made some contributions to its city and state, but not in any consistent way. In the 1930's, Dean Landis was instrumental in getting the Plan E form of government adopted in Cambridge. And Professor Amory's current service on the Cambridge School Committee is welcomed by the Law School. But it has been a long time since the School has done much for the state.

For many years, faculty members have been engaged from time to time in important services for the Federal Government. It is hoped that it will be possible for this to continue. But the School should, too, be a greater factor in its own community than it has been. It is hoped that there will be developments, through the Division of Research and otherwise, which will make this possible.

6. A School of World Law. There is another area in which the School has an opportunity and an obligation. We have here magnificent facilities. Due to the thought and care of our predecessors, we have a library of law of the world which cannot be matched elsewhere. We are already a center for students from many countries, and our graduates may be found all over the world.

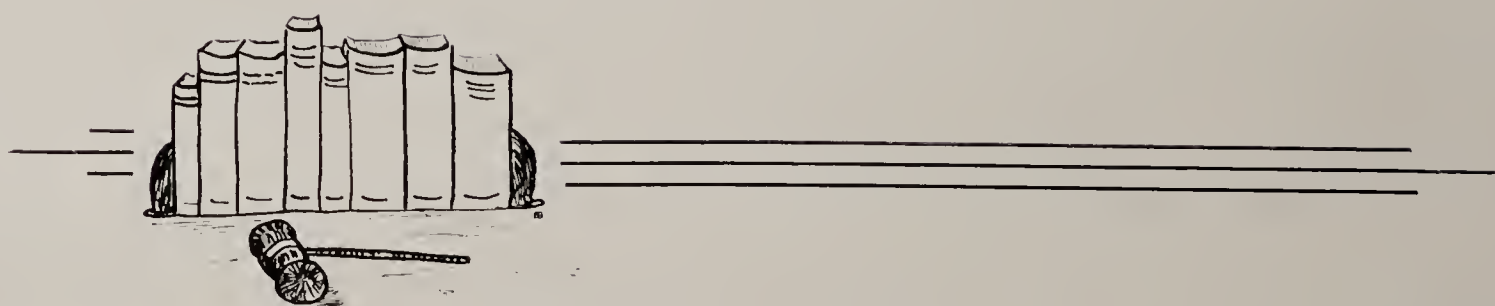

But we are essentially a common-law law school. As far as our regular undergraduate work is concerned, that is, of course, as it should be, and as it will no doubt remain. But we could do much more with foreign students, and with our own students who have special interests in foreign law and foreign affairs. Given the means (and we have already much to contribute ourselves), we could develop in Cambridge a School of World Law which might come to have great significance. It might have a student body of about two hundred, equally divided between graduates of American law schools, and foreign students with equivalent training in their own countries. This group could engage in general study of the world's legal systems, and in intensive work on special problems of interest to particular students, including the problems of world commerce and trade, as well as the structure of world organizations, and the development of machinery for the maintenance of world peace.

Such a project would require a considerable sum of money from one point of view, though a very small sum compared to what is spent now for past wars and current defense, and a very small sum in comparison to its potential usefulness. Such a development cannot now be outlined in detail nor can it be said when it will begin. But a development along these lines in association with the Harvard Law School, seems inevitable if the School is to meet in the future the great standards set in the past.

Such is a sketch of developments at the Harvard Law School. The future looks good to me. At least there is a lot to do, and we have many of the facilities for doing it. The developments outlined are squarely in the tradition of the Harvard Law School, which has long been a pioneer in legal education and in the development of the law. In the years to come many members of the faculty may have to revise their lectures. It will not be the first time that has happened.

Faculty

JAMES BRYANT CONANT
President of Harvard University

A native son, President Conant was born in Dorchester in 1893. He specialized in chemistry at Harvard College, graduating in three years with high honors in 1913. Receiving his Ph.D. in 1916, he served as Instructor in Chemistry until 1917. During World War I he worked with the government, and later was commissioned a Major in the Chemical Warfare Service.

Returning to Harvard in 1919 as an Assistant Professor, he became an Associate Professor in 1925, a Professor in 1927, and in 1929 Sheldon Emery Professor of Organic Chemistry. In June, 1933, he was elected President of Harvard University. War service called him again in 1940 and until 1946 he was Chairman of the National Defense

Research Committee. He became a member of the General Advisory Committee to the United States Atomic Energy Commission in 1946.

Among President Conant's other honors, he is an honorary fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the National Academy of Sciences, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the American Philosophical Society, and the Royal Society of Edinburgh and England. He is one of the outstanding authorities, and in the last year has published a new book on education, Education in a Divided World.

ERWIN NATHANIEL
GRISWOLD

Dean and Charles Stebbens
Fairchild Professor of Law

Born in East Cleveland, Ohio, in 1904, Dean Griswold received both an A.B. and an A.M. degree from Oberlin College in 1925. At Harvard Law School he compiled one of the highest averages ever attained and served as President of the Law Review. He was graduated in 1928 and was awarded an S.J.D. in 1929.

After practicing in Cleveland, Dean Griswold served as an attorney in the Office of the Solicitor General of the United States and as Special Assistant to the Attorney General from 1929 until 1934 when he was appointed to the Harvard Law School Faculty, becoming Dean in 1946.

Dean Griswold teaches Federal Taxation and has taught Trusts, Conflict of Laws and Administrative Law. He is highly recognized in these fields, having written two editions of Spendthrift Trusts and various articles. He compiled Cases on Federal Taxation and co-edited Cases on Conflict of Laws. In 1942 he was consulting expert to the Treasury Department and he has been an adviser to the Restatements of Trusts, Restitution, and Judgements.

LIVINGSTON HALL

Vice-Dean and Professor of Law

Upon his graduation from the Law School, Professor Hall entered private practice in New York City and in 1931 was chosen to serve as Assistant United States Attorney for the southern district of New York. He returned to the Law School in 1932 and was appointed Vice-Dean in 1939. During the war years he served as regional attorney for the O.P.A. in the Boston Area, and later with the Army Air Force in the Southwest Pacific.

His published writings include numerous contributions to legal periodicals and a case book on criminal law co-edited with Professor Glueck. This year he is teaching Agency and Criminal Law.

Born: 1903 in Chicago, Illinois.

Ph.B., 1923, University of Chicago; LL.B., 1927, Harvard.

RALPH JACKSON BAKER

Weld Professor of Law

Professor Baker began teaching Law as an Assistant Professor at the University of Pennsylvania in 1911. From 1914 to 1932 he practiced law in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, leaving there to join the Harvard Law School faculty.

He was an adviser to the American Law Institute's Restatements of Trusts and of Restitution, and has been an adviser in the drafting of the part on Investment and Instruments of the Commercial Code prepared by the Institute and the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. He has edited with Professor Dodd, Cases on Business Association. This year he is teaching Corporations II and Trusts.

Born: 1888 in Octoraro, Pennsylvania.

A.B., 1907, Swarthmore College; LL.B., 1911, University of Pennsylvania.

ZECHARIAH CHAFFEE, JR.

Langdell Professor of Law

Professor Chaffee came to the faculty of the Harvard Law School in 1916 after three years of practice in Providence, and became Langdell Professor in 1938. His studies have been chiefly in the fields of Equity and Negotiable Instruments, but his writings reflect his varied interests. Free Speech in the United States, Government and Mass Communications, Weathering the Panic of '73, State House vs. Penthouse: Legal Problems of the R.I. Race Track Row, and others including the forthcoming Some Problems of Equity.

In 1936 he drafted the Federal Interpleader Act and was in 1947 and 1948 a member of the United Nations Sub-commission on Information and Freedom of the Press. This year he is teaching Commercial Law, Unfair Competition and Equitable Remedies.

Born: 1885 in Providence, Rhode Island.

A.B., 1907, Brown; LL.B., 1913, Harvard.

EDWIN MERRICK DODD, JR.

Fessenden Professor of Law

After graduation from Harvard Law School in 1913, Professor Dodd spent three years in the practice of law in Boston. In 1916 he went to Washington and Lee University, and a year later he became a member of the Legal Section of the War Industries Board. He again entered private practice in Boston after the war, but in 1922 joined the University of Nebraska Law Faculty. In 1927 he resigned to become Acting Professor of Law at the University of Chicago. A year later he came to the Harvard Law School. From 1942 to 1945 he served as Compliance Commissioner in the War Production Board.

Professor Dodd teaches Corporations I. He is co-editor of Cases on Business Associations.

Born: 1888 in Providence, Rhode Island.

A.B., 1910, LL.B., 1913, Harvard.

LON LUVUOIS FULLER

Carter Professor of Jurisprudence

Professor Fuller began his teaching career at the University of Oregon in 1926. After two years he went to the University of Illinois and later to Duke University. In 1938 he was appointed to the Harvard Law School faculty, and concurrent with his teaching here he practiced law in Boston from 1941 to 1945.

In 1936 Professor Fuller won the Philips Award of the American Philosophical Society for an essay in Jurisprudence entitled American Legal Realism. A group of lectures entitled The Law in Quest of Itself was published in 1940. Professor Fuller is editor of a casebook on Contracts, and is author of readings called Problems of Jurisprudence. He teaches Contracts and Jurisprudence, and conducts a seminar on the latter.

Born: 1902 in Hereford, Texas.

A.B., 1924, J.D., 1926, Leland Stanford University.

MANLEY OTTMER HUDSON

Bemis Professor of International Law

Professor Hudson has taught at Harvard with some intermissions since 1919; he has held his present chair since 1923. After serving on various commissions at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, he became a member of the Secretariat of the League of Nations, and served as legal adviser to the International Labor Conference in Washington, 1919, Genoa, 1920, and Geneva, 1924. From 1933 to 1945 he was a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration on two appointments by President Roosevelt. From 1936 to 1946, he was a judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague, on election by the Assembly and Council of the League of Nations. In 1948 the General Assembly elected him a member of the International Law Commission of the United Nations and he now serves as Chairman of that Commission. Among his numerous publications are International Legislation, eight volumes; World Court Reports, four volumes; and the standard treatise on The Permanent Court of International Justice, 1920-1942.

Professor Hudson gives a course in International Law and a seminar in International Law Problems.

Born: 1886 in St. Peters, Missouri.

A.B., 1906, A.M., 1907, William Jewell College; LL.B., 1910, S.J.D., 1917, Harvard.

MILTON KATZ

Byrne Professor of Administrative Law

Professor Katz was secretary to U. S. Circuit Judge Julian W. Mack from 1931 to 1932. During the next eight years he was with R.F.C., N.R.A., S.E.C., and the Attorney General's Office. He came to the Law School in 1939 and was appointed Byrne Professor of Administrative Law in 1948.

During World War II Professor Katz was on leave of absence to serve with the government in Washington from 1941 to 1944. In 1944 he was commissioned Lieutenant Commander, USNR. He served in Europe with the O.S.S., and helped prepare the Eberstadt Report on unification of the armed forces.

In 1946 he returned to Harvard but this year has again left to serve with the Economic Cooperation Administration in Paris.

Born: 1907 in New York City.

A.B., 1927, LL.B., 1931, Harvard.

EDMUND MORRIS MORGAN

Royall Professor of Law

After his graduation, Professor Morgan practiced law in Duluth, Minnesota, until 1912 when he was appointed Professor of Law at the University of Minnesota. In 1917 he became Professor of Law at Yale and in 1925 joined the Harvard Law School faculty. During World War I he served as Lieutenant-Colonel in the Judge Advocate General's office. He was Acting Dean in 1936-37 and also from 1942 to 1945. From 1942 to 1944 he was Chairman of the War Shipping Panel of the War Labor Board. Since 1935 he has been a member of the United States Supreme Court Advisory Committee on Rules for Civil Procedure, and continues his public service, subject to approval by Congress, as Chairman of the Commission to draft a Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Professor Morgan was the reporter for the American Law Institute's Code of Evidence and is co-editor of Cases on Common Law Pleading and Cases on Evidence. He is editor of the University Casebook Series and author of Introduction to the Study of Law. He teaches Procedure and Evidence.

Born: 1878 in Mineral Ridge, Ohio.

A.B., 1902, A.M., 1903, LL.B., 1905, Harvard.

AUSTIN WAKEMAN SCOTT

Dane Professor of Law

Professor Scott was appointed as an instructor in the Harvard Law School in 1909, and as an assistant Professor in 1910, after a year of practice in New York City. He was Acting Dean of the Law School from 1915 to 1916, and has held the Story and Dane Chairs. In 1928 Professor Scott was President of the Association of American Law Schools.

He was reporter for the Restatements of Trusts and of Restitution (Part II) as well as co-reporter with Professor Seavey of the Restatement of Judgements. He also drafted the Uniform Fiduciaries Act, has edited casebooks on Trusts, Civil Procedure and Judicial Remedies, and is the author of various legal monographs. In 1939 he published his treatise on the law of Trusts. Professor Scott is now teaching Procedure and Trusts.

Born: 1884 in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

A.B., 1903, Rutgers; LL.B., 1909, Harvard.

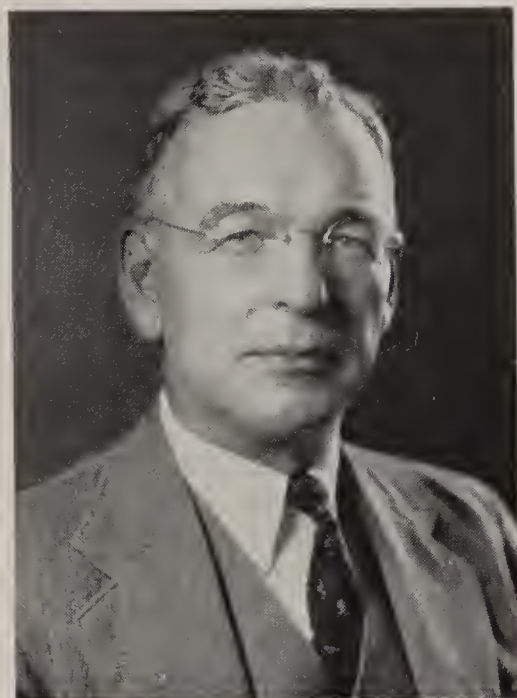

WARREN ABNER SEAVEY

Bussey Professor of Law

In 1906 Professor Seavey organized the Law School of Pei Yang University, China. From 1912 to 1920 he served consecutively at Harvard and on the faculties of the Universities of Oklahoma, Tulane, and Indiana. He was president of the Association of American Law Schools, 1947; was co-reporter for the Restatements of Agency, Judgments, Restitution and Torts; is editor of the American Case Book Series and has compiled casebooks on Torts and Agency. He now teaches Agency, Restitution and Torts.

Born: 1880 in Boston, Massachusetts.

A.B., 1902, LL.B., 1904, Harvard.

ROBERT AMORY, JR.

Professor of Law

Harvard Law Review

Now in its sixty-third year of publication, the Harvard Law Review is the oldest of the law school journals. Its pre-eminent position in the field of legal literature is a testimonial to the vision of its founders, who first conceived of a self-perpetuating law review, operated and edited on professional standards by those who are still in the educational process. In the original issue, these founders concluded their modest aims with, "Yet we are not without hopes that the Review may be serviceable to the profession at large." Its paid circulation of over 6,000, and annual gross income of approximately $60,000, demonstrate that the influence of the non-profit Review is not limited to the confines of the school. But serving the profession directly by reporting the continuous development of the law is not the Review's only function. As an outlet and an initiating force for legal scholarship, the Review has published selected legal thought of some of the foremost judges, practitioners and law teachers of three generations. The Review has been proud to list among its contributors the names of Holmes, Frankfurter, Pound, Ames, Beale, Williston, Scott and a host of others.

The Review also attempts to serve the student body of the law school by making available its resume of contemporary developments in the law through subscription at reduced prices, and by published collected reprints of selected articles dealing with specific subjects in the curriculum. The Legal Research Program, which offers third-year students an opportunity to acquire experience in legal writing and research similar to that done by the Review, is directed by three members of the editorial board. A final service is the preparation and distribution of a booklet setting forth a uniform system of citation, which is used by a great many practicing lawyers, and almost universally by other law journals.

Not the least of the aims of the Law Review processes is the training of its student editors. Approximately one-third of the published material is unsigned student work; the remainder, contributed by leading lawyers and teachers of law, is thoroughly edited by the student officers of the board. An example of the painstaking preparation of Review material is afforded by the Recent Case department. In selecting recent decisions of a significance warranting consideration, members of the board read all cases reported in the English language and occasionally noteworthy decisions in other tongues. The most important and interesting are selected in a panel discussion of the editors, called the case meeting. Reports from preliminary research are the basis for further sifting, and the cases finally to be treated are assigned to an individual editor who is primarily responsible for the finished product. His intensive research and writing is followed by thorough editing with two or three third-year men, and the generous and helpful criticism of a member of the law school faculty. To assure a continuance of the Review's tradition for technical accuracy, each citation is checked against the original source, and the copy is carefully proofread. The result of approximately three weeks' work involving the cooperative effort of six or eight editors, a completed Recent Case occupies only a page or a page and a half in the published issue. There can be little doubt, however, that the work is as educationally valuable as it is time consuming.

In recording, analyzing, and sometimes shaping the evolutionary processes of the law, the Review has the diverse purposes of serving practicing lawyers, legal scholarship, law students, and its student editors. Success in the fulfillment of one has fortunately proved to be a corollary to success in the others.

Board of Student Advisers

Although historians recording the history of the United States have so far chosen to ignore it, March 8th, 1910 is the date on which, in effect, a forty-ninth state was added to the Union. For on that date, the Faculty resolved to create the Board of Student Advisers, and with it the mysterious Commonwealth of Ames came into existence.

Some law clubs preceded the organization of the Board by more than three quarters of a century, but in those days little cohesion of purpose, little uniformity of method, and no systematic process of instruction had been evolved. Dean Ezra Ripley Thayer, understanding the great value of law club work, but also conscious of its early defects, conceived the idea of organizing a group of high standing students for the express purpose of coordinating law clubs and directing the moot courts. Dean Pound nurtured the Board in its infant years and watched over it through the many years of its growth. With his, and presently with Dean Griswold's help, the Board has reached its majority, and now provides the advantages of law club and moot court work to every interested student.

The law club project seeks to give all participants realistic training in the basic techniques of legal research, of formal brief writing, and of oral appellate argument. This is done with the help of the Ames Competition, a series of fictitious law suits, arising in the equally fictitious Commonwealth of Ames. The claims of their fictitious clients are argued by very real student counsels. To organize the Ames Competition, the members fulfill a threefold task which may be classified under the headings of Research, Instruction and Administration.

To keep the file of the hundreds of cases used in the arguments up to date, members constantly devise new cases, and revise old ones. Cases are constructed after much careful research, with particular view to fields where the law is still unsettled, or where there is a split of authority. The cases arise under the Common Law, or under statutes drafted for the purpose of the case. Much care is needed to make the factual setting realistic and the procedure legally plausible. There must be sufficient authorities to draw upon by either side to produce an interesting case, balanced for even argument.

The function which justifies the Board's title is that of instructing and assisting the student "attorneys" in a series of individual conferences. It is in these conferences that the Board member endeavors to instill in the beginner's mind the approach of the Common Law lawyer, some of the fundamentals of legal research, and a rigorous discipline in the substantive and formal aspects of brief writing and oral argument. To supplement the conferences, the Board conducts library tours, and edits the informational pamphlet, Introduction to Advocacy, of which the third, revised and augmented edition has just come off the presses. Ever searching for new and better media of instruction, the Board wrote, acted and sponsored the movie, Case in Point, a film explaining research on a typical Ames case. The Handbook for Students Entering the Harvard Law School is a booklet full of practical advice, addressed to the new student.

A good part of the Board's energies are necessarily spent in administrative tasks. With the help of volunteer supervisors, over fifty law clubs must be organized, and judges, drawn from the Boston Bar, the Faculty, and the student body must be invited. The details that must be attended to, from the moment that the briefs are exchanged to the moment the judges hand in their score cards, are legion. Not a little effort is expended in making available to other law schools information on the Harvard Law Club system, collection of cases and similar materials, as well as the movie, Case in Point.

The Board is presently composed of fifteen members. The selection is based upon high scholastic standing, those chosen ranking immediately after the editors of the Harvard Law Review. The members of the Board feel compensated for their efforts by the conviction that they have contributed an essential component to a sound legal education, and the satisfaction arising from service to their fellow students.

Harvard Legal Aid Bureau

Of the Harvard Law School organizations, the Legal Aid Bureau is perhaps one of the best known to residents of Greater Boston and surrounding communities. Judges, court officers, social agencies, members of the bar, law-enforcement authorities, religious groups, these and many others have all directed indigent and worthy persons in need of legal assistance to the Bureau's offices in Gannett House. The stream of clients has steadily increased since the reopening of the Bureau after the war, and cases handled during the year now total well over twelve hundred.

Cognizant of the responsible position it occupies in the community as a representative of the Law School, the Bureau has constantly striven to perfect its services and make them available to the ever-increasing number of persons seeking help. In the last year a branch has been opened at the North Bennett Street Industrial School in Boston's North End, plans have been completed for maintaining a reduced staff on duty through the summer months, thereby avoiding any substantial break in service, and the permanent staff of the Bureau has been increased to forty students, thus increasing the case load which can be effectively handled, and simultaneously offering to a greater number of students the opportunity to gain the valuable experience which work on the Bureau affords.

The Bureau's history extends as far back as 1893, when Professor Wambaugh decided to give his students actual experience in counselling persons with legal problems, but it was not until 1914 when it was incorporated as a Massachusetts charitable corporation dedicated to rendering legal assistance to needy persons that it emerged in its present form. With the exception of a four year period during World War II when its activities were suspended, it has continuously served the ideal incorporated into its charter. At the present time it is the only completely student managed and student-operated legal aid group in the country. It is, in addition, a member of the National Legal Aid Association.

Membership on the Bureau is limited to high-ranking second and third year students. Operations are posited on the principle of individual responsibility. Counsel takes all cases which come in during their office hours. They investigate the law, give advice, negotiate with the opposite party or his attorney, draw whatever documents are necessary, and if all else fails, take the case into court. Mr. Edward LeCam, of the Boston Legal Aid Society, is available for consultation with student counsel, and he is attorney of record, signing all pleadings that go before the court, but the major portion of the work is done by the students and ultimate responsibility rests with them.

There are certain requirements which must be met before the Bureau will accept a case. Each prospective client must make a statement of his resources to the Bureau member who handles his case and if the client appears able to pay a reasonable amount for legal services, the case is refused. Thus the Bureau does not compete with the local bar, but rather relieves them of the onerous obligation of taking clients who cannot pay a fee.

Further, the result which the client seeks to attain must be socially desirable. No affirmative action will be taken in a case involving domestic relations until an appropriate social agency has investigated and affirmed the social necessity of such action. Criminal cases are ordinarily referred to the Boston Voluntary Defenders Committee, and workmen's compensation problems are referred to the Boston Legal Aid Society. Bankruptcy cases are considered as being outside the scope of the Bureau's jurisdiction.

Firmly believing that the law should be brought within the reach of all persons within the community, the Bureau has sought to extend its services to all who can meet the eligibility requirements which experience and sound policy have established. At the same time, valuable training in the practical aspects of the law is afforded students. With these two principles as its foundation, the Bureau continues to be an integral and important part of the tradition of the Harvard Law School.

The Legal Research Program, instituted two years ago as an extra-curricular activity, is supervised by three Law Review Editors. Its purpose is to afford third year students an opportunity further to develop research techniques and gain greater experience in legal writing. The program is given twice a year, accommodating thirty-five students each term who devote a minimum of fifteen hours a week to the program.

The program is divided into two parts. Each student is assigned at least two memorandum questions involving a current problem of law. The memoranda typically will present varying factual situations requiring the answers to a series of questions which may ask for ways to avoid litigation or arguments available if litigation were to ensue. The questions are designed to take the student into research materials which are normally not encountered in the preliminary stages of the Ames Competition, such as loose-leaf services and legislative materials. After a week's work the memorandum of law is submitted to a supervisor in a form similar to that used in many law offices.

A two hour conference is then held between the supervisor and student, at which time the adequacy of the research, the precision of analysis, the effectiveness of the organizational scheme, and the clarity of expression are discussed.

The second part of the program is devoted to a longer and more exhaustive piece of legal writing. Each student either selects or is assigned a topic, which lends itself to original thinking and analysis, and which involves research problems. The student works six weeks on this topic, having several conferences during this time with a supervisor. These conferences are designed to iron out any problems the student may have encountered during the course of his research. During these conferences, possible changes in the scope of the topic worked on, new avenues for research and analysis, and organizational problems may be discussed. The final product, which approximates in form and length a Law Review note, is edited by a supervisor at a fifteen hour conference with the writer. After editing the student is urged to make whatever changes have been suggested during the edit. Each student is urged to take the edited note to a professor for a final critique and several students have been successful in having them published in non-student periodicals. The note may also be used to satisfy the School's writing requirement for graduation.

Harvard Law School Yearbook

Sharing office space with the Law School Forum was but one of the hurdles which the eight-man crew of the Yearbook overcame this year in its task of assembling the masterpiece in record-shattering time. The other hurdles were so numerous and varied that their description would enlarge this space beyond what are perhaps its proper proportions.

Suffice it to say that an unusually small and extremely competent body of individuals endured the rack for a large part of the first term this year to prepare a volume which invites comparison with the product of any other group of students. The preparation of a Yearbook is necessarily something which takes place behind the scenes, and is scarcely realized even by those in whose hands it is eventually and appreciatively received.

With its widespread public again in mind, the Yearbook in this volume attempts to be useful and attractive to all comers. It is of course for the reader to judge the success of these efforts, but the Staff feels quite proud of its extensive use of drawings and photographs, its balanced yet eye-catching lay-outs, and its many sections which are both descriptive and expository of the facets which Harvard Law School presents.

In addition, the Yearbook presents a complete directory of students, faculty and organizations. As a year-around guide to the School, it is an indispensable object, yet this aspect of its being is never allowed to mar the beauty and pleasure which even the casual observer can encounter on these pages.

As an enterprise, the Yearbook is conceived to be successful and thrilling. It should be pointed out that, besides the readers and the parents of this bouncing baby, the Law School Committee of Phillips Brooks House as its Godfather is interested in these same two elements. For it is this body which stands as financial backer, and absorbs whatever losses or profits are incurred by each edition.

And another category must be mentioned to round out this glimpse of the Yearbook. There are literally hundreds, from Secretary Kay on down, without whose assistance and cooperation this Volume could not have been produced. To this anonymous band, the Staff wishes to express its humble gratitude.

Harvard Law School Forum

This year the Law School Forum felt as well established in Gannett House as did its older housemates, the Review, the Legal Aid Bureau and the Yearbook. Unlike the latter organizations, however, it did not deal primarily with legal matters, but rather tried to provide information on outside current problems of interest to law students. It was with this aim that the programs were planned and the speakers procured throughout the year.

Dick Fink, as President of the Forum, did much of the preparatory work, and was on hand at each program to welcome visitors and introduce speakers. He had the pleasure of introducing such men as Ralph Sullivan, Massachusetts Representative, who spoke at the forum which discussed "Should Communists be Allowed to Teach in American Schools?" A week later the topic was "What Is New in American Literature?," and Dick was presenting Ludwig Lewisohn, Bernard De Vito, Elizabeth Janeway and Roger Burlingame. As always there were two introductions, the first for those attending the program, and the next for members of the radio audience who heard a transcription of the question period, along with a short resume of the prepared speeches with which each forum opened.

In spite of any false impressions which may have been created thus far, Dick did not do all of the work alone. He had help from Bill Patton and John Monroe, the Forum's "Veeps," Paul Edelman who acted as treasurer, and several men who served as co-ordinators for the individual programs. For example, David Alter was co-ordinator for the program at which delegates from Israel and Yugoslavia joined other members of the United Nations in a discussion of the future of that organization. Tom Farmer had the job for the following program when Reverend Reinhold Niebuhr and Clare Booth Luce asked, "Are Christianity and Capitalism Compatible?" It was Jack Rothstein who worked on the final program of the fall semester, and his topic was "What is Wrong with American Radio?" H. V. Kaltenborn, Norman Corwin and Quincy Howe came to Cambridge to give us the answer.

If these programs were designed to cover current problems beyond the realm of law, we hasten to add that the Forum sponsored another series at which law was the topic of discussion. Bob Kagan acted as co-ordinator, and our thanks go to the members of the faculty who made the series a success. Professors Howe and Freund opened the group of programs with talks on Mr. Justice Holmes and Mr. Justice Brandeis. Before the series was closed by Professor Chaffee, we heard Dean Griswold discuss the merits of the "Legal Education at Harvard." On another occasion Dean Sturges of Yale Law School spoke on legal education at that institution.

A separate function of the Forum, not one of its regular programs, was the School for Young Lawyers. Tony Nugent was co-ordinator, and he arranged to have over fifty New England lawyers come to speak at the seminars and classes. This year Senator Saltonstall discussed "The Lawyer in Politics." Tony and some of the other Forum members have promised to come back and give an address on the same topic in a few years. We wish them luck.

Harvard Law School Record

High above the hum of the student activity, in the uppermost recesses of Austin Hall, are located the offices of the Harvard Law School Record, which, though it is the School's youngest institution, is the oldest law school newspaper in America.

Founded in 1946 when the veteran-swollen Law School was only beginning to adjust itself to the postwar pace, the newspaper was designed to replace the grapevine as a medium of information and serve as a journal of opinion on the legal aspects of current problems. It has since proved to be of great value as one of the few institutions which has successfully combatted the tendency toward impersonality in Law School life.

The Record is published weekly and appears every Wednesday throughout the school year except during vacation and examination periods when the staff succumbs to the weakness of the flesh and "follows the crowd" in relaxing or studying for exams.

Every member of the Harvard Law School Association receives the Record as part of his active membership. The paper has a total circulation of about 7500, including alumni, faculty and students and is sent to all forty-eight states and eight foreign countries.

Aside from news and features, the mainstay of the Record has been its articles. Some have been written by students, like Arthur Brody's piece on Plain Talk For Lawyers, and others by well-known authorities in their fields. A. A. Berle, Jr., discussed the role of the lawyer in politics; Abraham H. Feller, general counsel for the United Nations, reported on the work of the United Nations legal staff; Chief Justice Laurence Hyde of the Missouri Supreme Court wrote on his state's method of appointing judges; former Dean Roscoe Pound reviewed the Chinese political situation, and Dr. Miriam Van Waters, Superintendent of the Framington Reformatory for Women, discussed developments in techniques of treating women offenders. Last year a series was started on the Law School in in years past, to which there have been contributions by Judge Augustus N. Hand, former Dean James M. Landis, and Professors W. Barton Leach, Edmund M. Morgan, Austin W. Scott, Warren A. Seavey and Samuel Williston.

Each issue of the Record features a "Gallery" of a faculty member or prominent alumnus. In the past there have been biographical sketches of Justice Harold Burton, Benjamin F. Davis, Jr., Judges Augustus and Learned Hand and Charles E. Wyanski, Senators James P. Kem, Leverett Saltonstall and Robert A. Taft, Frank Pace, Jr., Archibald MacLeish, O. John Rogge, and the entire Law School Faculty.

The "Alumni Notes" column describes activities of Law School graduates. "Sub Judice" discusses recent cases with a human interest angle. But probably most "human" of all are "Letters to the Editor." These include informative letters from the dean, angry letters from students in disagreement with an editorial on some aspect of School policy and that peculiar variation of poetry known as legal verse.

The Record has made its weight felt locally at the University and on a national scale. It has been cited in such publications as the New York Times, the New Yorker, Congressional Record and Time. The volunteer staff has conducted investigations of dining halls, parking spaces and athletic facilities at the University, and the campaign against paper bound casebooks was instrumental in halting their production.

The paper was the first to publish the results of Professor Lon L. Fuller's Survey of Legal Education, and among the first to announce the School's decision to admit women students next year. In addition, the staff has done yeoman work in keeping students informed of placement opportunities. It is no small wonder that Wednesday's most important reading for the busy law student is the Harvard Law School Record.

The year 1950 marks the twenty-first birthday of the Harvard Law Wives and perhaps the last year it can claim to be the only women's organization of the Law School. Next year may bring a new organization to the scene—The Harvard Law Husbands. If so, we will wish it as much success as the Harvard Law Wives have enjoyed.

Originally organized in 1929 as a small, informal social group, the organization provided one night a week for wives in which they didn't have to worry whether Post caught Pierson or whether Professor Morgan's examinations were really that tough. The meetings lapsed during the war years when law school enrollment was drastically reduced, but in 1945 the Law Wives were reorganized with a new constitution, a broader basis of activities and greatly expanded membership. Kendall House was offered to the wives for a meeting place in exchange for the operation of a light lunch room for law students. With funds provided by the administration, the wives redecorated Kendall House and created an attractive social center for student activities. Later, the wives raised funds for a radio-phonograph and other needed equipment. A lunch cafeteria was instituted and a day nursery for student's children was set up. Both of these were finally turned over to the administration but Law Wives continue to assist in the management of these now major undertakings. In 1947 a portable sewing machine was purchased which is available for the home use of members without charge.

Kendall's Kaloric Kontent

The primary aim of the law wives has always been to provide social contact among the wives and, notwithstanding other accomplishments, this has been regarded as its best service. This year, under the leadership of Mrs. Winston V. Morrow, Jr., a variety of interesting activities were offered to the members. Sponsored by Mrs. Erwin N. Griswold, wife of the Dean of the Law School, and with the added interest and assistance of Faculty Wife Advisers, the organization has enjoyed the fullest possible cooperation from the Law School. Meetings are held every Wednesday night. Once a month there is a bridge meeting with prizes, and with instruction for beginners. Plans are under way to expand this to include Canasta. Although the peak year for numbers of married students was 1947 and their number has steadily declined since then, the law wives have maintained numerical membership equal to the 1947 figure—which in itself attests to the increasing popularity of the organization.

Among the outstanding programs arranged this year by Mrs. Donald K. Paradis were talks by Mrs. Niles Baker, Harvard Adviser to Student Wives, Mrs. W. Hamilton Walters who gave us the results of world-wide recipe gathering, a progressive bridge party for husbands and wives, a Pot-Luck Supper, and a series of other talks with themes ranging from International Affairs to Interior Decoration.

From the annual get-together tea given by Mrs. Erwin N. Griswold in the autumn to the farewell party in late April, the Harvard Law Wives fill a definite role in the overall picture of the law school and it is to be expected that this well-established organization will continue to prosper in the years to come.

Harvard Law School Association

The Association was founded at Cambridge on November 5, 1886, and has ever since served the Law School as the body representing all alumni.

Application for membership is unnecessary because, under its Constitution, all men who have studied at the school (and whether graduates or not) are automatically members.

There are three classes of membership:

1. Life Membership, which costs a single payment of $50.00.

2. Active Membership, dues for which are $5.00 a year, except that the dues are $2.00 per year for younger alumni during their first five years "out."

3. Inactive Membership, which consists of those who fail for two years to pay their annual dues.

The affairs of the Association are in the hands of a Council composed of twelve men, being elected each year to serve four-year terms.

General Meetings of the members are held only on special occasions. The best practical plan has been found to be the holding of a luncheon meeting each year at the time and place of the annual convention of the American Bar Association. Such meetings have been held every year since 1920 without interruption except during the war years. These meetings are addressed by the Dean or some member of the Faculty and thus "the School is brought to its alumni."

During the past year an Executive Committee was elected by the Council of the Association, and this Committee will meet frequently throughout the year to discuss various problems and policies with reference to the administration of the Association.

The officers of the Association are elected each year by the Council.

The officers for 1949 are:

President, John G. Buchanan (A.B. Princeton '09) LL.B. '12

1st Vice-President, Hon. Calvert Magruder (A.B. St. John's '13) LL.B. '16

2nd Vice-President, Monte M. Lemann (A.B. Harvard '03) LL.B. '06

Secretary, C. Tracy Barnes (A.B. Yale '33) LL.B. '37

Treasurer, Paul F. Hellmuth (A.B. Notre Dame '40) LL.B. 43/47

Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer, Harrison S. Dimmitt (A.B. Princeton '20) LL.B. '25

The Law School Committee of Phillips Brooks House

Phillips Brooks House, familiarly known as PBH, is the center for the voluntary social service activities of the students throughout the university. The House itself serves as a meeting place for social, cultural and religious groups, while its services to University students include the maintenance of a list of rooms in private homes and the operation of a ticket selling agency whereby students can purchase tickets for the legitimate stage productions in and around Boston.

Founded in 1909, the Law School Committee of Phillips Brooks House is one of the many PBH committees established in each of the graduate schools and the college. Headed this year by Reuven J. Katz, chairman, James T. Jenkins, secretary, and M. Peter Moser, treasurer, the committee is composed of twenty-one members, elected from the first, second and third year classes by members of the committee.

Early in the fall a "get-acquainted" dance was held for first year men, with girls invited from near-by colleges, while throughout the year, formal and informal dances were sponsored regularly. Touch football, squash, basketball and softball leagues were organized, and prizes awarded to the winning teams. Early in November a Law School Directory was published and distributed free, containing names, addresses and telephone numbers of all students.

In an attempt to relieve students from endless solicitations, the Committee organized a charity drive, the proceeds from which were distributed to various needy organizations. This successful activity will be continued in the future.

In addition to its three officers, the membership of the 1949-50 committee included: third year; Borden F. Beck, Jr., Sidney D. Pinney, Jr., Burt S. Hofman, Edwin M. Watson, Edward Bragdon, Jerome Gelman and Albert J. Marks; second year; Richard J. Dunn, Joseph Dow, Sidney Kess, Harold Trachtenberg, Charles F. Wheatley, Jr., and Albert L. Cohn; first year; Robert Reid, Tony de la Pena, Frank Seabee, Marshall A. Binder, and William A. Carroll.

The Lincoln's Inn Society is an association of law school students founded in 1908 for the purpose of giving its members a cheerful place to eat and to fulfill some of the social needs which tend to be overlooked at law school. Its present clubhouse is at 44 Follen Street where its dining halls, reading rooms and bar offer congenial relaxation.

The Inn sponsors a number of dances during the year and encourages faculty-student lunches. Its biggest social event of the year is the Annual Christmas Dinner. The 1949 dinner was, in part, a farewell to Professor Morgan.

This year, as last, the Inn has given honorary membership to special foreign law students at the School, and this has been a valued aspect of our club activities.

The new officers for 1950 are: William W. Gaulty, President; Samuel J. Ervin, Vice President; Crane Winton, Treasurer; John J. Murphy, Secretary. Board of Governors: Lucius Biglow, Theodore Crolius, George Flinn, Lane McGovern, Samuel Murphy, Atherton Phleger.

The Chancery Club carries on the tradition of providing its members with the finest in dining and social facilities during the 1949-50 year. The new dining hall under the able stewardship of Mr. George Cushman reached a new high in quality and service. Along with the traditional programs, a successful house improvement project was accomplished—the entire first floor was done over including a complete modernization of the dining room.

1926 saw the formal incorporation of the Chancery Club, and the present Club house at 1557 Massachusetts Avenue was acquired in 1929. With the exception of the war years the Club has been continuously active as a social and eating center for its student membership, which numbered two hundred during the past year.

As the present graduating class bids adieu to dear old Chancery they will certainly carry with them fond recollections of the past year including: those six straight football week-ends that almost broke the back of the social committee, the rugged touch football season, the seemingly perpetual bridge game in the card room, tripping the light fantastic at the fabulous Christmas dance at Longwood Cricket Club, those fine parties in the basement lounge every week-end; events which make it difficult to recall that we did do a little work on the law during our stay in Cambridge.

King's Bench is now three years old. It was founded in February, 1947, by a few students who believed there was a need here at the Law School for a club that would provide opportunity for fellowship among students of all races and creeds. To that end they established King's Bench.

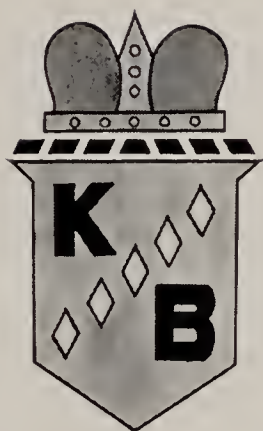

The club now provides a varied group of social events including dances, smokers, and luncheons. Speakers are invited from time to time to discuss topics felt to be of interest. Faculty members have been gracious in attending many of the events and have contributed largely to the success of the organization, both in advice and in providing stimulating discussion.

At present a Club House is being considered and a fund raising plan is in progress. The Council of Justices feel that this would extend the usefulness of King's Bench by providing a place where its members and their friends could spend some of their leisure hours in a congenial atmosphere at low cost. The opportunities for fellowship could thus be considerably broadened.

Ames Competition

Since shortly after the founding of the Harvard Law School, in 1817, there have been moot court trials held by student law clubs. Until 1911 there was no formal organization of this competitive supplement to classroom instruction, nor was there any agency which insured that all entering students would be given an opportunity to participate in such work. The Ames Competition, founded pursuant to a gift from Mrs. James Barr Ames in accordance with the wishes of Dean Ames, was established in 1911 and provided the framework for law club moot court activity since that time.

Although entirely voluntary, the work of the law clubs is undertaken by over 95 per cent of the students entering the school, and this work is itself organized and conducted by students, with the aid of faculty members who serve as advisers to the law clubs.

Most of the cases argued are laid in the courts of the mythical Commonwealth of Ames, a forty-ninth state of the Union, where every case is one of first impression. There is an occasional case where the Ames Legislature enacts a statute to pose issues of interpretation and constitutionality for the student counsel to solve, but in most cases in this mythical common law jurisdiction there is neither statute nor precedent of anything more than persuasive force.

In the first year, the law clubs, consisting of eight men each, schedule four intramural singles arguments and two intramural doubles. The Board of Student Advisers holds conferences to assist counsel with the organization of their cases and the preparation of their briefs, and it is in this work of preparing a brief and presenting an oral argument that each of the student counsel becomes familiar with the tools of legal research and the techniques of written and oral advocacy.

An inter-club qualifying round, consisting of four arguments for each club, is held in the third term, with all members taking part. The qualifying round cases are more difficult, the briefs longer, and Boston lawyers and faculty members join upper classmen on the bench. In the quarter-finals, each of the qualifying clubs is represented in oral argument by two members, and all members cooperate on the brief. The briefs and records are printed at School expense, and Judges are invited from the State and Federal bench and bar. The arguments are held in Langdell Court Room. A prize for the best brief in the quarter-final round is awarded by the Marshall Club.

The semi-final and final rounds are organized in the same manner. These attract large audiences and are important events on the Law School calendar. The name of the winning club and its members are engraved on the Roll of Honor, a bronze plaque in Langdell Library. In addition, a prize of $300 is awarded to the winning club, and $200 to the runner-up. Victory in the Ames Competition is one of the most important and coveted student honors.

Participation in the Ames Competition is a valuable adjunct to classroom work not only because it develops techniques of persuasion and legal research, but also because it is highly interesting and realistic, and succeeds in animating the study of law beyond the power of the classroom.

The year 1949 saw the Choate Club again emerge all-victorious from the final round of the Ames Competition and take a well-earned place on the list of immortals inscribed on the bronze tablets in the Law School library. This marked the fourth time in the history of the Ames arguments that Choate has been so honored—a record equalled by but few law clubs.

The club bears the name of Rufus Choate (1799-1859), a United States Senator and member of a prominent Massachusetts family of lawyers and judges. He is reputed to have been widely noted for his oratory, and this tradition has been a large factor in the club's success in the Ames arguments. Rufus is now remembered for the fact that his portrait hangs at the front-center of Langdell Hall North.

The Choate Club is justly proud of its status as one of the oldest law clubs in the school. The appearance of its name as winner of the Ames Competition in 1912, the first to be recorded on the bronze library plaques, affords adequate testimony to the fact that the club may be classified as a permanent Law School institution.

Cardozo Club

Exhaustive research in the vaults of Langdell, systematic perusal of over three pages of records of the Board of Student Advisers, extensive interrogation of some of the oldest inhabitants of the law school have proven conclusively that the Cardozo Club was not the first law club to be organized. It appears to date back all the way to 1938, ante bellum, however, and except for a short hiatus during the war (which further research has shown to have been caused by the lack of students at the Law School), it has been going strong ever since.

As this article goes to press (in fact this is a scoop—except for the minor detail that it won't appear in print for three more months), the Third Year Court has just emerged victorious in its semi-finals argument, and it goes forth to the finals next spring secure in the knowledge that it can only win or lose. This court is composed of Stanley S. Brotman, Samuel Dash, Paul S. Edelman, Ray Eder, Robert E. Frisch, William K. Glikbarg, Albert A. Raphael, Jr., and Marshall J. Seidman.

Just to show that research was done on this article, we point out that the Club in earlier years went to the quarter-finals of the competition at least once (Spring, 1957), 7 Harvard Law School Year Book, 185 (1948), and that way back in 1939 it combined with the McLoughlin Club for the qualifying round.

Faculty advisers have been Harrison Dimmitt, and Professor Paul A. Freund, who replaced Mr. Dimmitt in 1948.

Casner Law and Equity

Under the guidance of Professor A. James Casner, the Casner Club, founded in 1938, has had noteworthy success in the Ames Competition. Since the war, Club counsel have reached the semi-finals twice and the quarter-finals once. The spirit manifested by the present participants augurs well for our future success.

For the purpose of enabling the Club to carry on its activities with greater vigor, the two court system has been adopted, initiating a new development in Ames Competition work. Taking in a full complement for the Law and Equity Courts each year will mean a membership of forty-eight in the fall of 1950. Aside from the preparation of briefs and argument which is marked by hard work and a will to win, some of our activities which make for a close-knit organization, noted for its fellowship, are bi-weekly luncheons with occasional guest speakers, social events (including an annual award dinner), and the circulation of a periodic alumni letter relating significant news. In addition, an effort is made to aid new members in adjusting to the impact of the first year.

The high repute of the club is due in large measure to the interest and cooperation of our sponsor.

Cavers Club

Coke Club

The written records of the Holmes Law Club go back to 1911, but there is substantial evidence tending to prove that its founding took place at some time prior to that date.

Since its inception the club has adhered to the purpose of achieving excellence in written and oral advocacy. Recent successes have included the participation in the finals of the Ames Competition in 1948, and the qualification of the present second year court to argue in the quarter-finals. Included in the list of members of the Holmes Club are the names of Professor W. Barton Leach, who served as secretary to Justice Holmes in 1924-25, and James McCauley Landis, former Dean of the Harvard Law School.

Holmes Club

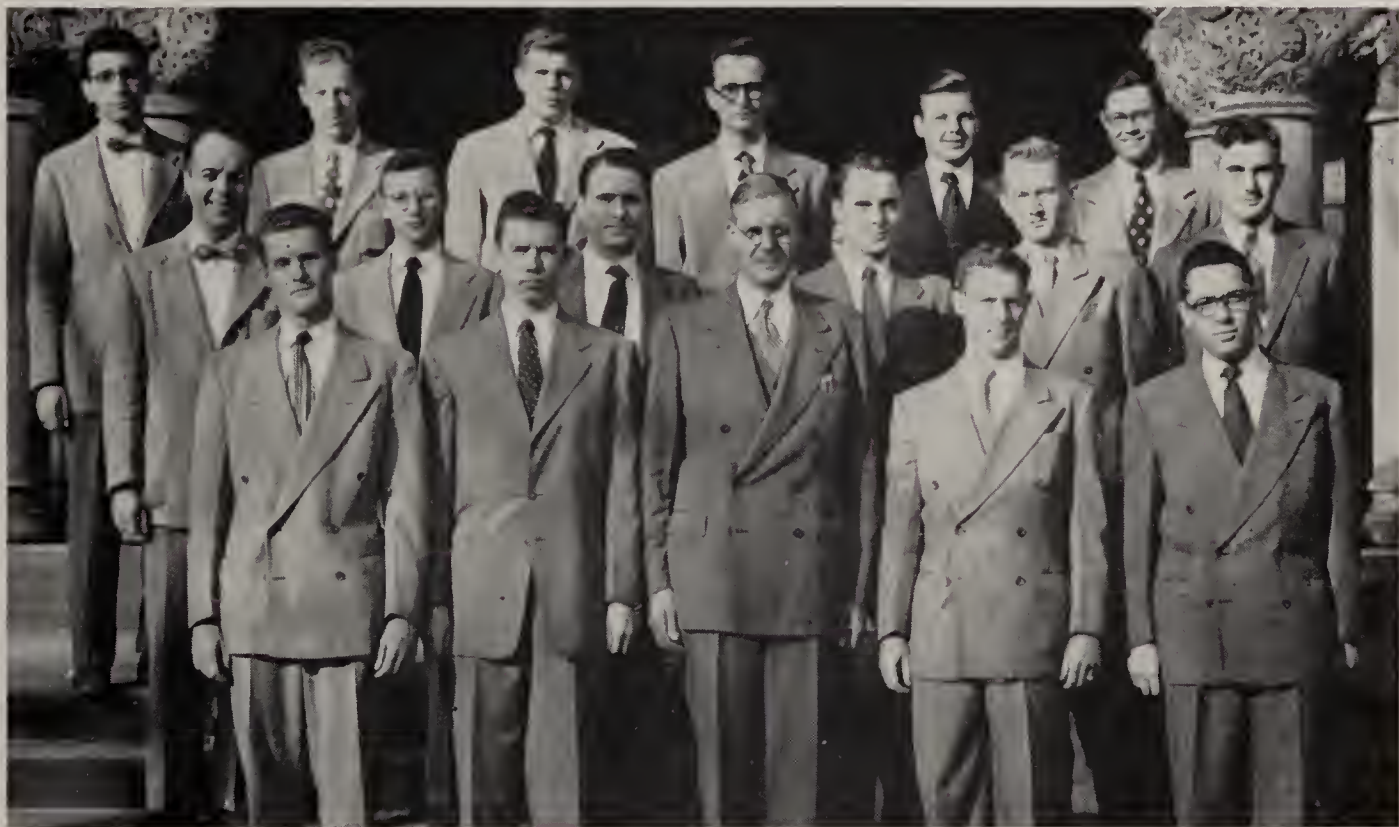

The smokers and informal meetings held throughout the year are as well attended as the Ames arguments, and are punctuated by the presence of our faculty sponsor, Professor Leach, who makes a definite contribution to the zest and interest of the conversation. This year was marked by the discovery of two hundred dollars in a local bank, which a treasurer of the club in the 1920's failed to pass on to his immediate successor, apparently in the belief that the present members of the club should have both an intellectual and pecuniary legacy with which to carry on their work.

Dodd Club

Eight independents founded the Mansfield Club in 1947, on principles of hard work and cooperation. Though the Review has been cheerlessly devoid of Mansfield membership, an arguably more desirable notoriety graced the Club from the first, as five of its members got married—determined to outnumber, if not outsmart, the opposition.

Fame struck again in the qualifying round, where four Mansfield teams lost none of their arguments and captured one rara avis in American jurisprudence, a tie decision.

In the quarter-finals, Val Schoenthal and William Dunn were chosen oral Counsel, with Carroll Bumpers, Lionel Epstein, Reuven Katz, William Patrick, James Rigrish and Harold H. Smith on the brief. Arguing for the government in an income tax case based on Farkas v. Commissioner, the Club won a unanimous decision over the Casner Club, and the Sheldon Prize for the best oral argument in the quarter-finals went to oralist Dunn.

Fortune deserted in the semi-finals, where Mansfield Club lost a close 2-1 decision to the Powell Club, though winning a unanimous holding on the law. With the continued advice and encouragement of Professor Kaplan, the first year court hopes to carry on to eventual bronze immortality.

Marshall Club

The Marshall Club prides itself upon being the oldest law club in the Harvard Law School. It was founded in or about 1825. Although many of the records of its early life have either been misplaced or lost there are four volumes of its early history now shelved in the Treasure Room of Langdell Library. It was through the benevolent efforts of our faculty adviser, Professor Austin W. Scott, that these records were located. We are guided by the memory of former distinguished members—John Chipman Gray, Jeremiah Smith, and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

We are proud of our past but we do not dwell on it because our future looks bright. We were fortunate in the last year in obtaining two fine first year courts. Since the Ames Competition was inaugurated the Marshall Club has welcomed the opportunity to participate in oral advocacy both within the club and with other clubs. It is eager to continue to do so in the future. Each year a prize is awarded by a former supervisor to the first year man who achieves the highest grade on his first argument.

The present members carry forward the founding principle of social amenity both informally and at the Club's semi-annual dinners. Many a pleasant evening has been spent in the company of Professor Scott and Professor Baker, our faculty advisers, or with some other member of the faculty. Here the flavor of the law is instilled within the members.

Glueck Club

Powell Club

Professor Thomas Reed Powell joined the Law School faculty in 1925. The Powell Law Club was founded shortly thereafter, and has since remained one of the most active clubs in the Commonwealth of Ames.

In its legal aspect, the Club has distinguished itself in having twice won the Ames Competition, in 1938 and 1939. At this writing, the present third year court has reached the finals argument, and will seek top honors again in the spring term of 1950. As a quasi-social institution, the Club has sought to maintain a membership drawn from many regions of the country.

With the retirement of our distinguished sponsor in 1949, it is appropriate here that the members of his Club record our gratitude for his generous participation in all of our activities. Although he protests that "the Supreme Court has repealed all my knowledge," his perorations at Club gatherings have never failed to improve the members' legal knowledge, as well as their humorous and skeptical faculties. On behalf of the many alumni of the Club, we extend our sincere appreciation for his interest, his assistance, and his untiring wit. We are equally pleased, for the sake of those who come after us, that Professor Powell has decided to continue his active sponsorship in the future.

Seavey Club

It is no secret that the name of the Seavey Club has yet to reach the winners plaque in Langdell Library. Nor can the Seavey Club point—with or without pride—to a long history dating back to the days of Justice Story. With no laurels and no venerable history behind the Club, it might well be asked then what has kept it an active and growing organization?

From a somewhat slow start after the war, the Seavey Club has built up a large and active membership. That membership has been gained under a well-settled policy of seeking wide territorial distribution among its members. The current membership is proof of the fulfillment of the policy. Along with an active interest in seeking Ames Competition honors, a well-rounded social program has developed. The more memorable events of that program are the annual "Seavey Teas" and the Club banquet at which the Club prize is awarded the first year member gaining the highest personal score in first term arguments.

Perhaps the above summary will answer the question posed earlier to some degree, but the real answer to the Club's growth will be found in its sponsor, Professor Warren A. Seavey. His guidance and interest in Club activities have been of inestimable value, and his readiness to use his wit in discussing anything and everything of interest to the members has provided an attraction to Club activities that can seldom be equaled.

Jeremiah Smith Club

This year marks the end of another era in the history of the Jeremiah Smith Club. The occasion is the retirement of our distinguished sponsor, Professor Edmund M. Morgan. Since the resignation of Mr. Justice Frankfurter to accept his position on the Supreme Court in 1939, Professor Morgan has superbly guided the Club through the pre-war and post-war eras.

During the period of Mr. Morgan's stewardship, the Jeremiah Smith Club has been notable for its record in the Ames Competition along with its social activities. Since its post-war reactivation in February, 1946, the Club has qualified four out of six times for the higher brackets of the Ames Competition. The annual club dinner in the past few years has featured such distinguished guest-speakers as the late Mayor La Guardia, Mr. Justice Frankfurter and Dean Pound.

It is the hope of every member of the Club that the testimonial dinner in honor of Professor Morgan this year will be fitting to express the sincere appreciation of the present and the past members for the inimitable guidance of our esteemed moderator.

Ancient and honorable tradition, combined with a lively interest in the law, are the hallmarks of the Story Club.

Named for Joseph Story (1779-1845), Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and the first to hold the chair of Dane Professor of Law at Harvard, the club is the third oldest organization participating in moot court arguments. Early records reveal little; but it is well established that the Club enjoyed a fruitful existence in the Twentieth Century. Professor Scott reports that the Club was flourishing when he was a member in 1906, and Professors Chafee and Dodd testify that it stood equally high in 1913 when they argued for it. Professor Hart reports the early traditions and standards were maintained when he was a member in 1930.

Although operations were suspended during both World Wars, the post-war reconstruction has been successful in each case; and since the reorganization after World War II, the Story Club has thrice argued in the quarter-finals of the Ames Competition.

Believing that man liveth not by law alone, the Club each year engages in a program of social activity which has been highly successful.

One of the contemporaries of Chief Justice Taney said there was no replying to "that infernal apostolic manner of his." This comment can come as no surprise to a student who has contemplated his portrait which dominates Langdell North. Perhaps this remarkable demeanor resulted from his practice of reading law twelve hours a day. While the members of the present court occasionally fall slightly short of this goal, they find the legal and social activities of the Taney Club a rewarding substitute.

The record of the club in the Ames

Competition since the end of the war has been gratifying to its members. It reached the finals in 1947 and the quarter-finals in 1949. The third year court at the request of the Board of Student Advisers presented the model appellate argument for the first year class this fall. Members of the second and third year courts have also won individual honors.

The friendly interest and advice of Professor Ernest J. Brown is deeply appreciated by all club members.

A New Feature Developed for Quick Last-Minute Law Finding...

Each annotation in ALR2d is kept to date by means of the "Blue Book" pages contained in the 3-in-1 Combined Digest, Word Index and Supplemental Decisions Service. These "Blue Book" pages list all cases decided subsequent to the date the annotation was written.

Now these subsequent citations are classified to the exact section of the annotation to which they relate.

Many subscribers have informed us that this is a splendid improvement in ALR service.

There are many other improvements in the new ALR2d annotation service. Write either publisher for full information.

"Jahn & Ollier Again"

A familiar and reassuring slogan

FAMILIAR...because it has appeared in thousands of the country's finest year-books for the past half century.

REASSURING...because those years of specialized experience bring complete service, outstanding quality and dependable delivery to the yearbook staffs, with whom we work.
